

SOCIAL EDUCATION

Graduate profile

The Bachelor's Degree in Social Education is designed to develop competent professionals for socio-educational intervention, aimed at promoting personal development and the educational, social and cultural participation of individuals, groups and communities in a variety of social contexts. The aim is to produce professionals with a sense of ethics, who are critical and committed to a model of a participatory and supportive society, with a particular focus on people and situations of inequality, vulnerability or exclusion.

Social Education graduates will be competent to:

- Provide a basis for and frame the socio-educational action in the current scientific and professional findings.
- Establish and maintain interpersonal relationships to assist people using these services and their families.
- Organise, encourage and support the smooth running and development of human groups.
- Identify and support the various dimensions of community participation and development processes.
- Design and implement socio-educational intervention schemes, programmes, projects and activities in different contexts.
- Organise, manage and coordinate socio-educational services and centres in keeping with the various technical and ethical quality criteria.