

The programme is designed for ambitious individuals who seek to be part of the rise in human rights discourse and practice. Whether you are pursuing a career as a human rights defender, preparing for training in international law or keen to gain experience in campaigning, our interdisciplinary approach based on our internationally renowned research in this field makes us an ideal choice. If you are looking to work in campaigning and advocacy with NGOs or IGOs, charities, pressure groups, research, journalism, academia, law or government, this MA programme is an excellent option for you.

WHO IS THE MASTER'S AIMED AT?

To prepare students to:

- Work professionally and effectively with the protection, promotion and implementation of human rights in a changing global context.
- Take up careers in human rights work in different sectors within civil society organisations, governments, the public sector and business.
- Develop analytical skills and expertise in human rights perspectives, contexts, organisations, policy-making and practice.
- Evaluate and apply these skills to different cases and environment.
- Develop human rights-based policies, programmes and projects with professionalism.