2. THE PEDRO ARRUPE HUMAN RIGHTS INSTITUTE

The European Master's Degree in Human Rights and Democratisation (E.MA) is one of the educational and training programmes carried out by the Pedro Arrupe Human Rights Institute. The latter, which is part of the Faculty of Social and Human Sciences, was created in 1997. It aims to achieve one of the fundamental aspects of the ideal mission assigned to the University of Deusto: to contribute towards the edification and spreading of the culture of Human Rights in general, particularly in the Basque Country.

The work developed by the Human Rights Institute is built around three pillars or programmes of action:

- A) Teaching: it aims to spread knowledge on topics related to human rights, and to train agents and experts to be capable of intervening in favour of human rights with technical professionalism and competence. We currently offer a PhD programme, three international Master Courses and a non-official programme on human rights for indigenous leaders of Latin America.
- B) Research: Research is the Institute's core objective, which is carried out through the "Sociocultural challenges and Human Rights in a Changing World" research team. This programme has three officially recognised main research lines that have many conceptual and methodological synergies, depending on each project. Research lines include:
  - International protection and human rights
  - International migration and human rights
  - Human rights, cultural diversity and social cohesion
  - Research methods in human rights
- C) Outreach and impact: its aims is to spread a culture of assumption and respect for human rights throughout the Basque, Spanish and international societies, to denounce social injustice and the violation of rights, and to provoke serious and reflective social debate on political or social aspects from the perspective of human rights. The Institute carries out a wide range of activities aimed at disseminating knowledge, and has a number of publications to increase awareness and commitment to promoting a Human Rights and building social awareness:

- Publications: Deusto Notebooks on Human Rights, Deusto Journal of Human Rights, Monographs, and other related publications.
- Outreach activities: such as conferences, seminars, workshops or congresses.
